

Tara is a 2016 graduate from the Mercer University Physician Assistant Program in Atlanta, Georgia. During her time at Mercer, she participated in several community outreach programs including the South Georgia Farmworker Health Project and multiple vaccination clinics. She also worked with colleagues at Mercer to design a free folic acid supplementation program for women at high risk of developing folic acid deficient outcomes. They presented the program at several professional conferences, including the 2015 Georgia Association of Physician Assistants Annual Summer Conference. Tara recently moved to Houston, Texas to work within the pediatric surgery department at Texas Children's Hospital. She is very excited to start her professional career as a physician assistant and looks forward to collaborating with others to promote pediatric advocacy and care. Tara enjoys running, yoga, and spending time with her family.
